

Marilyn McShane is currently a Professor in the Criminal Justice Department at the University of Houston-Downtown and the Director of the Community Justice Institute there. She has been teaching at the undergraduate and graduate level for over 18 years and has over a million dollars in local, state and federal grants related to research in criminal justice policy. She has published 16 books and edited works including two encyclopedias. In addition she has over 35 academic journal articles appearing in refereed sources. Dr. McShane previously worked for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice in legal services management and was the Chair of the Criminal Justice Department at the Northern Arizona University in Flagstaff.